You're invited to a special Montana legislative event on Tuesday, Feb. 7, at The Nature Conservancy in Montana conference room for a reception and premier of a new 20-minute film about Montana private land conservation. The reception starts at 5:30 PM, and the film will start about 6:00 PM. We'll have beer and wine and light food available.

Produced by Bozeman filmmaker and photographer Eric Ian and the Montana Association of Land Trusts, this film marks the 40th anniversary of the state's first conservation easement in 1976. Since then, landowners have partnered with land trusts and agencies to conserve 2.4 million acres of private land throughout the state.
